The Gospel Changes Everything

From Genesis to Revelation, the Bible tells the story of God's powerful plan to redeem and renew. Through Jesus, we're not just improved—we're made new (2 Cor. 5:17). The gospel transforms hearts (Ezek. 36:26), restores relationships (Eph. 2:14–18), reshapes communities (Acts 2:42–47), and brings hope across borders and cultures (Rev. 7:9).

That's why we send missionaries. Because the gospel doesn't just inform—it transforms. It changes lives, families, and communities. It compels us to go, give, pray, and partner—so that every tribe and tongue may know the One who changes everything.

Lives Transformed by the Gospel

"God transformed me from a hostile atheist—who went to church just to argue—into a joyful believer who now serves others with my baking and leads Bible studies in my home."

Manar, Middle East

"Though I'm in prison, I'm a new believer through the gospel shared by missionaries, and now I spend my time in God's Word, amazed by His grace and praying He uses my life and testimony to shine His light even here behind bars."

Kit, Thailand

"Despite my husband's persecution and a village drought, I held onto my faith in Jesus—and when my crops miraculously thrived, even my husband surrendered to Christ and helped plant a church."

Josephine, Zambia

"I was a broken, addicted, suicidal man trapped in a cycle of violence—until I cried out to Jesus, and He gave me new life, hope, and purpose."

Ivan, Ecuador
